Reading Initiatives for 1990 and 1991 Announced at White House Reception

First Lady Barbara Bush, honorary chairperson of the Library's national Year of the Young Reader campaign, greets reception guests in the East Room of the White House.

At a White House reception hosted by First Lady Barbara Bush on November 15 to honor participants and sponsors of "1989–The Year of the Young Reader," Librarian of Congress James H. Billington announced two new Library of Congress reading initiatives.

National Book Week, an annual celebration of books cosponsored by the Center for the Book in the Library of Congress and the National Book Foundation, will take place January 21-27, 1990. National Book Week was authorized by a Joint Resolution of the 100th Congress "to promote books and writers, encourage reading, and advance the cause of literature in the United States."

The second initiative is "1991–Year of the Lifetime Reader," a year of promotional activity that will be sponsored by the Center for the Book in cooperation with organizations, corporations, and Federal agencies. "1991–The Year of the Lifetime Reader" will emphasize intergenerational projects, family literacy, adult literacy and reading motivation projects, and the needs of blind and physically handicapped readers.

"We urge national organizations and their local affiliates, corporations, and individuals throughout the country to develop projects for both National Book Week and "1991–The Year of the Lifetime Reader," said John Y. Cole, director of the Center for the Book. "Our goal is to increase public awareness and appreciation of books and reading and the values of a literate and creative society," he added.

The Center for the Book in the Library of Congress was established in 1977 to stimulate public awareness and appreciation of books, reading, and libraries. The programs of the center and its 19 state affiliates are supported by tax-deductible contributions from corporations, individuals, and foundations.

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin is issued weekly by the Information Office of the Library of Congress and distributed free of charge to publicly supported libraries and research institutions, academic libraries, learned societies, and allied organizations in the United States.

Comparable institutions and organizations in other countries may arrange to receive the Bulletin on an exchange basis by applying in writing to the Library's Exchange and Gift Division. All other correspondence should be addressed to the LC Information Bulletin, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540.

John D. Webster Appointed Director, Financial Services

John D. Webster has been named director, Financial Services, Library Management Services.

Mr. Webster, who previously worked for 14 years with the Office of Personnel Management (OPM), assumed his duties on November 6. Mr. Webster has worked in a number of financial management positions associated with government-wide benefit programs. His last position with OPM was deputy assistant director for financial control and management, with responsibility for accounting, budget, management information, quality assurance, and administrative services for the Retirement and Insurance Group.

Before joining the Federal government in 1975, Mr. Webster was a senior accountant with Deloitte, Haskins & Sells, where he specialized in C.P.A. audits and systems development for public and private corporations.

Mr. Webster is a Certified Public Accountant and a Certified Internal Auditor. He holds a bachelor of science degree in accounting from the University of Maryland. He has taught accounting and auditing courses at the Northern Virginia Community College and the Howard Community College in Columbia, Md. Mr. Webster is a member of the Association of Government Accountants and the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Mr. Webster resides in Columbia, Md., with his wife Gloria and their children, Kim and John.

NACO LSP Libraries Now Number 22

The National Coordinated Cataloging Operations (NACO) expanded the authority application of the Linked Systems Project (LSP) with the addition of four more libraries in September 1989: Louisiana State University; Texas State Library; University of California, San Diego; and University of Pittsburgh. A joint project of the Library of Congress, the Online Computer Library Center (OCLC), and the Research Libraries Group, Inc. (RLG), LSP is a computer-to-computer link allowing for online contribution and distribution of authority records.

LSP Record Transfer provides OCLC and RLG with up-to-date copies of the Library of Congress Name Authority File, and in addition provides a mechanism for OCLC and RLG NACO participants to contribute name authority records directly to the Library of Congress from their respective input-update systems.

Records are transmitted between systems and loaded within a 24-hour period. LSP provides more timely and accurate access, eliminates duplicate work, and makes contributed records available to library users more quickly. The contributed authority records are also available to MARC tape subscribers.

Carl Schurz Lecture Series Opens at Library of Congress

An enthusiastic audience heard Professor Hans L. Trefousse lecture on "Carl Schurz Today," in the Coolidge Auditorium on October 3. The program inaugurated the new Carl Schurz Lecture Series at the Library of Congress sponsored by the German-American Cultural Fund.

The audience was welcomed by David Kraus, acting chief of the European Division, with additional introductory remarks by Lothar Griessbach, president of the German-American Cultural Fund, and by Juergen Ruhfus, Ambassador of the Federal Republic of Germany to the United States. Margrit B. Krewson, the Library's German/Dutch area specialist in the European Division, coordinated the program.

Professor Trefousse, Distinguished Professor of History at Brooklyn College, N.Y., described the long and impressive career of Carl Schurz, a 19th-century German-American immigrant who was a revolutionary, politician, Civil War general, diplomat, journalist, and reformer. Schurz was a man far ahead of his time, noted Dr. Trefousse, and a review of his career serves as a reminder "that long before Hitler's crimes blackened Germany's reputation, its citizens enjoyed the reputation of being among the most liberal and forward-looking immigrants to come to these shores. . . They were in the forefront of the fight against slavery, they steadfastly opposed bigotry of all sorts, they sponsored labor unions, and they firmly adhered to the democratic ideal."

Selections from the Carl Schurz papers, which are part of the collections of the Library's Manuscript Division, were displayed in the foyer of the Coolidge Auditorium in honor of the evening's events.

Among the guests in attendance at a reception in the Whittall Pavilion preceding the lecture were Senator Bill Bradley; Ambassador Juergen Ruhfus and Mrs. Ruhfus; Count Hagen Lambsdorff, Economics Minister of the Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany, and Countess Lambsdorff; Dr. Ferdinand Trauttmansdorff, cultural counselor, Embassy of Austria; Michael Zickerick, cultural attache, Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany; Prof. Hartmut Lehmann, director of the German Historical Institute, and Mrs. Lehmann; Mr. and Mrs. Laslo Von Hoffman; and representatives of West German industry and the West German press.

were representatives of the four libraries: Linda Barnhart, University of California, San Diego; Dan Havlik, Texas State Library; John Sluk, University of Pittsburgh; and Ann Stanton, Louisiana State University.

Responsible for the LSP training at the Library of Congress were: Suzanne Liggett, coordinator, NACO; Lester Vogel, assistant coordinator for cataloging, NACO; Oxana Horodecka, assistant coordinator for planning, NACO; Veronica Gillespie, MARC Editorial Division; and Larry Dixson, Network Development and MARC Standards Office.

Karen Calhoun, an OCLC key trainer, taught OCLC-specific procedures. Training in NACO LSP procedures was given by the following Library of Congress senior descriptive catalogers: Ann Della Porta, Elvirita Gildea, Brenda Hemingway, and Edward Tappe. Ann Della Porta, substituting for Veronica Gillespie, provided content designation and MARC tagging training.

In addition to the Serial Record Division at the Library of Congress, there are now 22 institutions contributing authority records to the national authority file via LSP: American Antiquarian Society; Columbia University; Getty Art History Vocabulary Group; Eighteenth-Century Short Title Catalogue/North America; Indiana University; Louisiana State University; Minnesota Historical Society; NACO-Music Project at the Indiana University Music Library and the Sibley Library of the Eastman School of Music; OCLC; University of Pittsburgh; Princeton University; St. Louis University School of Law; Stanford University; Texas State Library; U.S. Department of the Interior; U.S. Government Printing Office; University of California, Los Angeles; University of California, San Diego; University of Illinois, Urbana/Champaign; University of Maryland; University of Michigan; and Yale University.

Report from Colloquium On Malagasy History

The sixth international colloquium on Malagasy history (Sixième Colloque International d'Histoire Malgache) met in Antananarivo, Madagascar, July 31-August 5, on the theme, "History and Civilization of the Central Plateaus."

This was the final colloquium in a series of regionally focused meetings which began in 1979 at Toliara and which has met successively at Mahajanga (1981), Toamasina (1983), Fianarantsoa (1985), and Antsiranana (1987). Each has been organized by the Etablissement d'Enseignement Supérieur et de Recherche des Lettres (U.E.R. d'Histoire) of the Université de Madagascar, recently redesignated as the Université d'Antananarivo. (The several campuses of the Université de Madagascar have recently been reorganized as separate universities). This colloquium met in the conference room of the Madagascar Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Scholars from Madagascar, France, Italy, the United Kingdom, the United States and other countries attended, along with many history students from the universities of Antananarivo, Toamasina, and Toliara.

More than 50 papers were presented, predominantly on history, but including related disciplines such as archaeology, on which there were several papers, and literature. The major themes explored were those of traditional society and culture, 19th-century politics, French colonization and society, and Antananarivo in the 20th century.

Three papers, those by MM. Raherisoanjato, Judic, and Munthe, dealt specifically with archival or library resources. A paper by Danielle Andrianjafy-Ratsiorimihamina on contemporary Malagasy literature in French occasioned a lively debate on the present seemingly moribund condition of Malagasy literature and literary publishing. Gwyn Campbell of the University of the Witwatersrand, South Africa, presented an innovative study of the historical demography of Madagascar in the 19th century.

As with the preceding meetings, the proceedings of this colloquium will be published in a special number of Omaly sy anio/Hier et aujourd'hui, published by the history department of the Université d' Antananarivo. The cumulative contribution of these colloquia to the evolution of contemporary Malagasy historiography has been very great.

Suzy Platt Marks 25 Years at Library

Mrs. Platt receives her 25-year pin from Mr. Ross as Catherine Ann Jones (right), chief of the Congressional Reference Division, looks on.

Suzy Platt was honored for her 25 years of Federal service at the Library of Congress with a celebration in the office of the Congressional Reference Division on September 29. A Federal Service Award pin for 25 years was presented to Ms. Platt by Joseph E. Ross, director of the Congressional Research Service, with many of her friends and colleagues in attendance.

Ms. Platt came to the Library in 1960 as a special recruit. After the six-month program was over she accepted a position in the Telephone Unit of the General Reference and Bibliography Division, where she learned reference work. There were only two employees in the unit, and they answered calls from the public, the White House, and other government agencies. In the fall of 1961, Ms. Platt joined a staff of eight as a reference librarian in the Main Reading Room.

Four years later, she received an offer to work as school-community librarian in Mangla, West Pakistan. She accepted—the summer of 1964 was a good time to leave the Library, as the Main Reading Room was closed for the first time since 1897 for cleaning and the installation of air conditioning.

She returned to the Library in 1968 as a reference librarian in the Congressional Reference Division. In 1969, she was promoted to assistant section head of the Special Reference Section. She became acting section head in January 1974, and was made section head in July of the same year. Following a reorganization in 1975, she became the coordinator of resources for the division.

In 1977, Ms. Platt was detailed to the Reference Department to train four librarians hired to staff the Research Guidance Office. Her job in the Congressional Reference Division was redescribed in 1981 as resources development and review officer.

Ms. Platt is the editor of Respectfully Quoted: A Dictionary of Quotations Requested from the Congressional Research Service, published by the Library this year.

She received Outstanding Performance Ratings in 1972 and 1988 for her work on that book and the quote file; a Meritorious Service Award and a Cash Award in 1978 for developing the division training program and for her work in selecting, organizing, and training the Research Guidance Office staff; and a Meritorious Service Award in 1980 for work on the Information Center of the White House Conference on Libraries and Information Science.

Staff Activities

Frederick M. Kaiser, a specialist in American National Government in the Congressional Research Service, was a participant in a symposium titled, "Strengthening World Order and the United Nations Charter System Against Secret Warfare and Low-Intensity Conflict," held on October 14 at the United States Institute of Peace.

On October 25, he was part of a panel discussion on the topic, "Congressional Oversight and the Constitution in the Reagan-Bush Era." This was one of a series of programs organized by the American University and sponsored in part by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

William Patry, policy planning advisor, Copyright Office, traveled to Cairo, Egypt, and Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, October 5–14, as a member of the United States delegation that conferred and negotiated with Egyptian and Saudi officials on revisions to their patent and copyright laws necessary to enable these countries to comply with the requirements of 1988 trade law.

Carol Pulin, curator of fine prints, Prints and Photographs Division, juried the "Biennale du dessin, de l'estampe, et du papier du Québec 1989." The opening of the exhibition this summer in Alma, Quebec, Canada, coincided with the annual colloquium of the Conseil québécois de l'estampe. At that meeting, Dr. Pulin spoke in French on the topic "Contemporary Printmaking in the Americas."

Her essay, "The 1989 Quebec Biennial of Drawings, Prints, and Paperworks," was published in French and English in the exhibition catalog. She also published "L'estampe contemporaine aux Etats-Unis" in the journal De l'estampe (vol. 8, no. 1, 1989).

Vivian Ovelton Sammons, who recently retired from the Science and Technology Division, is the author of Blacks In Science and Medicine, a reference work that fills a void in the field of scientific biography by compiling information on more than 1,500 black individuals who have made contributions to science. The need for such a resource was made clear by the demand for Ms. Sammons' 1985 Science Tracer Bullet titled Black Scientists.

The book is published by Hemisphere Publishing Corporation, and is available in hardcover ($45) from bookstores, or directly from Hemisphere (call 1-800-821-8312). It is available for examination in the Science Reading Room, fifth floor, Adams Building.

in 1932. He emigrated to the United States in 1948, and received a master of comparative law degree from George Washington University in 1951.

Dr. Fischer came to the Library in 1950 to work in the former Foreign Law Section of the Law Library. In 1952 he moved to the Inspection Unit of the Order Division, serving as accessioner, then assistant supervisor, and finally supervisor. He became a subject cataloger in the field of law when he joined the Subject Cataloging Division in 1962. He was promoted to professional assistant in law classification in 1969, and to specialist in law classification in 1972.

Dr. Fischer made a significant contribution to the development of the Library's classification system for law through his work on the subclasses of Class K Law. He retired in 1979 after more than 28 years of service.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret Harpster Fischer, whom he married in 1981, and a brother, Andrew E. Fischer.
